TERMS OF ADMISSION.

The requisites for admission to the Freshman Class are testimonials of a good moral character, a thorough acquaintance with English, Latin and Greek Grammar, Cæsar's Commentaries or Sallust, Virgil, Cicero's Select Orations, Latin Prosody, the making of Latin, the Gospels of the Greek Testament, Jacobs's Greek Reader, Ancient and Modern Geography, Vulgar and Decimal Fractions, Proportions, the Doctrine of Roots and Powers, and Algebra, so far as to be able to solve Equations of the second degree. It is recommended to Students in preparation, to read attentively some convenient manual of Greek and Roman History. Kühner's Elementary Greek and Latin Grammars, including the Exercises, or Champlin's Greek Grammar, and the Latin Grammar of Andrews and Stoddard, are required.

Candidates for advanced standing are examined in the preparatory studies, and in the various studies to which the Class they propose to enter have attended. Those who are admitted from other Colleges, must present certificates of regular dismission. In all cases testimonials of good moral character are required.

The stated times for examination are Monday and Tuesday before Commencement, and the first and second days of the first term.

SELECT COURSE.

Individuals of suitable age and acquisitions, wishing to fit themselves for mercantile, agricultural, or any of the other active pursuits of life, will have every facility for pursuing a Partial Course of study, of not less than one year—they selecting such studies as they may desire. They will be required to recite with the regular College Classes at least twice a day, will have free access to the Libraries and Lectures, and on leaving the Institution will be entitled to a regular certificate of their respective attainments.

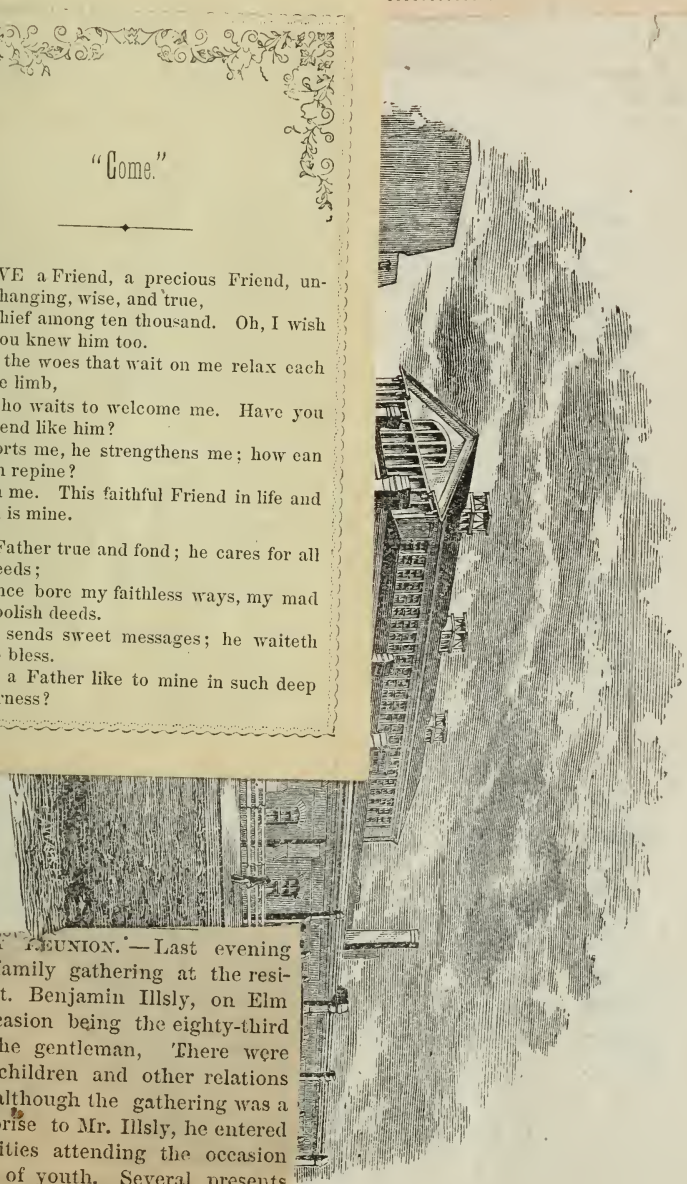
"Come."

I HAVE a Friend, a precious Friend, unchanging, wise, and true,
The chief among ten thousand. Oh, I wish you knew him too.
When all the woes that wait on me relax each feeble limb,
I know who waits to welcome me. Have you a Friend like him?
He comforts me, he strengthens me; how can I then repine?
He loveth me. This faithful Friend in life and death is mine.

I have a Father true and fond; he cares for all my needs;
His patience bore my faithless ways, my mad and foolish deeds.
To me he sends sweet messages; he waiteth but to bless.
Have you a Father like to mine in such deep tenderness?



ON TREMON

BIRTH-DAY REUNION.—Last evening there was a family gathering at the residence of Capt. Benjamin Illsly, on Elm street, the occasion being the eighty-third birthday of the gentleman, There were about thirty children and other relations present, and although the gathering was a complete surprise to Mr. Illsly, he entered into the festivities attending the occasion with the vigor of youth. Several presents were given.

For me a kingdom doth he keep; for me a crown is won.
I was a rebel once—he calls the rebel child his son.

I have a proved, unerring Guide, whose love I often grieve;
He brings me golden promises my heart can scarce receive;
He leadeth me, and hope and cheer doth for my path provide.
For dreary nights and days of drought, have you so sure a Guide?
Quench not the faintest whisper that the heavenly Dove may bring;
He seeks with holy love to lure the wanderer 'neath his wing.

I have a home—a home so bright, its beauties none can know;
Its pavement sapphire, and such palms none ever saw below.
Its golden streets resound with joy; its pearly gates with praise;
A temple standeth in the midst no human hands could raise.
And there unfailing fountains flow, and pleasures never end.
Who makes that home so glorious? It is my loving Friend.

"COME." 3

My Friend, my Father, and my Guide, and this
our radiant home,
Are offered you; turn not away; to day, I pray
you, "Come."
My Father yearns to welcome you, his heart,
his house to share.
My Friend is yours, my home is yours; my
Guide will lead you there.
Behold one altogether fair—the faithful and the true!
He pleadeth with you for your love; he gave his life for you.

Oh, leave the worthless things you seek; they perish in a day;
Serve now the true and living God; from idols
turn away.
Watch for the Lord, who comes to reign; enter the open door;
Give him thy heart—thy broken heart—thou 'lt
ask it back no more.
Trust him for grace and strength and love, and all thy troubles end.
Oh, come to Jesus, and you 'll find in him a loving Friend.

CHRIST GLORIFIED.

THE head that once was crowned with thorns
Is crowned with glory now;
A royal diadem adorns
The mighty Victor's brow.

The highest place that heaven affords
Is his by sovereign right;
The King of kings and Lord of Lords,
He reigns in glory bright;

The joy of all who dwell above,
The joy of all below,
To whom he manifests his love,
And grants his name to know.

To them the cross, with all its shame,
With all its grace is given.
Their name an everlasting name;
Their joy, the joy of heaven.

To them the cross is life and health,
Though shame and death to him;
His people's hope, his people's wealth,
Their everlasting theme.

EXHIBITION.

There is an Exhibition of the Senior Class on the Seventh Wednesday of the first term.

PUBLIC WORSHIP.

All the Students are required to attend some place of public worship on the Sabbath; each Student or his parent or guardian being permitted to select for attendance either of the places of public worship in the village.

EXAMINATIONS.

There is a public examination of all the Classes at the close of each term. In the Mathematical and all the English branches the Student is required to exhibit his attainments, in any part of the term's study assigned to him, without being questioned, and to conduct the discussion himself.

The final examination of the Senior Class occurs five weeks before Commencement.

TERM BILLS.

There is kept an accurate account of each Student's absences from all exercises upon which his attendance is required; also, of his general conduct and scholarship. This account, in connection with the regular term bill, is sent to the Student's parent or guardian at the close of each term. Each Student is required to procure satisfactory bonds for the payment of his bills by the opening of the second term, and is not allowed to have at any time more than two term bills unpaid.

COMMENCEMENT AND VACATIONS.

Commencement is on the second Wednesday of August. The first vacation is of four weeks, from Commencement; the second is of eight, from the third Wednesday of December; the third is of two weeks, at the close of the second term. The first term is fifteen weeks; the second and third terms, each twelve weeks. The terms are so arranged as to give a long vacation in the Winter, which may be profitably occupied in teaching, by those whose circumstances require it.

EXPENSES.

Tuition, Room-rent and use of Library, . .	$35.00	$35.00

TERMS OF ADMISSION.

The requisites for admission to the Freshman Class are testimonials of a good moral character, a thorough acquaintance with English, Latin and Greek Grammar, Cæsar's Commentaries or Sallust, Virgil, Cicero's Select Orations, Latin Prosody, the making of Latin, the Gospels of the Greek Testament, Jacob's Greek Reader, Ancient and Modern Geography, Vulgar and Decimal Fractions, Proportions, the Doctrine of Roots and Powers, and Algebra, so far as to be able to solve Equations of the Second Degree. It is recommended to students in preparation, to read attentively some convenient manual of Greek and Roman History. Kühner's Elementary Greek and Latin Grammars, including the Exercises, or Champlin's Greek Grammar, and the Latin Grammar of Andrews and Stoddard, are required.

Candidates for advanced standing are examined in the preparatory studies, and in the various studies to which the Class they propose to enter have attended. Those who are admitted from other Colleges, must present certificates of regular dismission. In all cases testimonials of good moral character are required.

The stated times for examination are Tuesday before Commencement, and the first day of the first term.

SELECT COURSE.

Individuals of suitable age and acquisitions, wishing to fit themselves for mercantile, agricultural, or any of the other active pursuits of life, will be allowed to pursue a Partial Course, for any length of time not less than one year, selecting such studies as they may desire. They will be required to recite with the regular College Classes at least twice a day, will have free access to the Libraries and Lectures, and on leaving the Institution will be entitled to a regular certificate of their respective attainments.

The final examination of the Senior Class occurs five weeks before Commencement.

TERM BILLS.

There is kept an accurate account of each student's absences from all exercises upon which his attendance is required; also, of his general conduct and scholarship. This account, in connection with the regular term bill, is sent to the student's parent or guardian at the close of each term. Each student is required to procure satisfactory bonds for the payment of his bills by the opening of the second term, and is not allowed to have at any time more than two term bills unpaid.

COMMENCEMENT AND VACATIONS.

Commencement is on the second Wednesday of August. The first vacation is of four weeks, from Commencement; the second is of eight, from the fourth Wednesday of December; the third is of ten days, at the close of the second term. The first term is of fifteen weeks; the second and third terms, of twelve weeks each. The terms are so arranged as to give a long vacation in the Winter, which may be profitably occupied in teaching, by those whose circumstances require it.

EXPENSES.

COLLEGE EDUCATION.

[From the Report of the Faculty for 1855.]

COURSE OF STUDY.

College studies should generally be of a kind requiring higher talents for their acquisition, and ampler means for their illustration than are found in ordinary schools. There is so much to be done in the higher departments of study, that the college should leave to lower schools all that can as well be performed there. The college is no place for the study of elements. These being so obviously useful and appreciable by all, and so entirely within the reach of ordinary talents and means, may safely be left to lower schools. It is only in the rarer kinds of knowledge, essential to the proper development of the mind, or a true view of nature, and not immediately appreciable by the popular taste, that the elements may be pursued in college.

College studies, also, should be of a fundamental character. They should be such as lay the foundation for future progress. The most extended college course covers but a very small portion of the field of knowledge, and hence the studies which it does embrace should be of a radical character. It should open the various avenues to knowledge, if it does not trace them through their whole extent. It should give one the instruments for the acquisition of knowledge, if not the knowledge itself. It should put into the hands of the student the key of the temple of science, though it conduct him only to the threshold.

Hence professional studies, or those looking specifically to particular pursuits, should generally be excluded from the college course. The design of the college course is to educate man as man, and not as this or that sort of a man. A college education should not be the education of peculiarities, neither is it designed to produce peculiarities and specialities of taste and attainments. It has nothing to do, directly, with preparing men to become physicians, or lawyers, or clergymen, but rather with giving them the mental discipline and culture required by all the professions, and fitting them to prosecute with distinction any of the pursuits of life. Much less is college education designed to prepare men for making money. It should teach them the laws of nature, among other things, and if they wish to avail themselves of these laws to make money, they are at liberty to do so; but this, plainly, should be no part of the aim of a college course. A mercenary education is not, surely, a liberal education. To teach men to experiment upon nature, so as to extort pelf from her, is not to teach science, but a mere knack, and about the lowest knack of all.

Again, a right college course should aim at discipline quite as much as at knowledge. Its studies should be of a disciplinary character, embracing principles rather than mere details of fact. Discipline gives the command of knowledge; it is the key of knowledge, and, if applied, will infallibly open to us its stores. The most that can be said of a man of mere knowledge is, that "he is a walking library;" but a man of a thoroughly disciplined mind is a working engine. If knowledge be power, discipline is still greater power. While, therefore, the college should not neglect knowledge, it should have a predominant aim at discipline. Knowledge may be acquired afterwards, but discipline, severe, scientific discipline, if not gained in college, is rarely gained at all. Nay more, discipline, as we have seen, lays the best possible foundation for the after acquisition of knowledge. It shapes and prepares the powers for future work, and supplies principles for our guidance, thus opening the way for indefinite improvement.

The general object of our course may be said to be, on the one hand, to teach men to think, and on the other, to teach them to express their thoughts. While the mathematical, physical, metaphysical, and ethical sciences are chiefly exercises in thought, rhetoric and the languages are chiefly exercises in the art of expressing thoughts.

METHOD OF INSTRUCTION.

There are two general methods of instruction in our colleges, which may be variously designated in contrast, as the strict and the loose, the exacting and the imparting, the independent and the questioning methods of instruction. The one seeks to train the mind to regular, consecutive modes of thinking, the other allows more latitude for rambling; the one requires an exact knowledge of the lessons assigned, though it be necessary for this purpose that they be quite short, the other requires longer lessons, though they be but imperfectly mastered; the one makes the pupil get and recite his lessons for himself, the other, if it do not aid him in getting his lessons, assists him by questions in reciting them; the one trains the mind to acting, the other to receiving; the one aims primarily at discipline, the other at knowledge.

The former is the method of instruction in this college, and can there be any doubt, in general, that this is the superior method? The chief argument for the discursive, questioning method is, that it enables the pupil to go over more ground. But does it exercise his mind more? Does he really get a larger number of distinct and clearly defined ideas? We think not. And certainly this method does not impart so good a preparation for life as the other. However it may be in the recitation-room, we cannot be led along through life by questions. To succeed in the world, one must be able to express his ideas independently. What one wants as a public man is, to be able to possess himself independently of the ideas which pertain to any subject, and to state them clearly in his own language. If he cannot do this, he will fail. Now it is precisely in this that our whole course is a constant exercise. Every lesson is an exercise in mastering certain ideas, and every recitation an exercise in expressing these ideas in independent language and in connected order.

MANAGEMENT AND DISCIPLINE.

The successful management of a college requires that its students be kept regularly and diligently employed in their studies. Thrift of every kind requires regularity and diligence. There can be no progress without them, and least of all in learning. If sound scholarship be essential to the success of a college, hard study must be. Besides, study is the very end for which young men are sent to college. Whatever may have been their own purposes, it is to be presumed that their parents and guardians expect them to attend faithfully to their studies. Nay, in most cases, it is probable that they would immediately take them away from college, if they knew they were neglecting their studies. A college faculty, therefore, are solemnly bound to see that their pupils do not neglect their studies.

No college can be properly and successfully managed, unless quiet and good order be maintained among its students. Without these, their appropriate duties cannot be performed. Of all employments, study especially requires quiet. The mind cannot work successfully in the midst of noise and confusion. And, packed together so closely as students are in college, a little noise becomes a great disturbance to a large number. Hence mere noise, as such, is always a great evil in college, and must be prevented; much more, mischievous and malicious disturbance. The industrious, the quiet, the peaceable, must be protected from the idle, the mischievous, and the malicious. Unless this be done, not only all study, but all virtue must disappear.

The management of young men, at the age and under the circumstances in which they are in college, is a difficult task. Brought together from different parts of the country, and forming a little community of their own, with a public sentiment untempered by the lessons of experience and the counsels of parents and friends, they often adopt false maxims and rules of conduct, and are uneasy under the most wholesome restraints. The very hopefulness, enterprise, and large expectations of young men make them difficult to suit. At the same time, their training at home has not always been the most favorable for their quiet in college. One who has not been taught subordination in the family, can hardly be expected to exhibit much of that quality in college. And any bad habits allowed at home cannot fail of being aggravated under the stronger temptations and weaker restraints of college life. The well-ordered home is the best preparation for quiet and order in college.
